INTRODUCTORY NOTE

- To guide and facilitate the use of the Code as to which articles are in force or not, notes have been inserted wherever possible below the articles or as footnotes all over the text of this translation.

- In various areas of law although corresponding Indian Acts have been extended to Goa, there are provisions in the Civil Code which do not have a corresponding provision in the equivalent Indian legislation. Therefore it is often an open arguable question whether a provision of the Civil Code is in force or not.
- Unlike certain local legislations like the Code of Comunidades, the text of the provisions of which were actually amended, bodily amendments in the text of the articles of the Civil Code were never carried out at any time after Liberation.
- This type of amendment was done only once by the Portuguese Central Government at Lisbon, by Decree No. 19126 of 16-12-1930, when the text of many articles were amended and subsequent editions of the Code were published with the amended text.
- The Family Laws (Marriage, Divorce and Protection of Children) enacted in 1910-11 were also not physically integrated in the body of the Code.
- So also the Goa Succession, Special Notaries and Inventory Proceeding Act, 2012 enacted in 2016 does not directly and specifically repeal but only states that corresponding provisions shall stand repealed.
- A comprehensive re-codification of the Code including in it also the Family Laws, Succession and Inventory into one unit is the need of the hour.
- The Portuguese Civil Code, 1867 has survived by virtue of Section 5(1) of the Goa, Daman and Diu Administration Act, 1962.
- Article 348 of the Constitution provides for an English translation of legislation which is in a language other than English. Such a translation is to be published in the Official Gazette and shall thereafter be deemed to be the authoritative text thereof in the English language.
- The High Court of Bombay at Goa by Order dated 24-03-2017 in Public Interest Litigation (Suo Moto) No. 1 of 2017 also ordered that an official translation of this Code in English be prepared.
- Vide Order dated 20-11-2017, the Law (Estt) department, committed a Committee who carried out the work of translation of the above Code, headed by Adv. Shri Fernando Elgar Noronha.
- In this Code, each provision is referred to as an article which corresponds to what we call section in Indian legislation.
- In the said Code, the word Section is a part of a chapter and consists of a number of articles.
- Brief titles/headnotes have been inserted for each Article of the Code so as to facilitate its use.
- Many concepts in the Civil Code do not have a synonymous expression in Indian or English Law. Hence various legal concepts and expressions have been translated to the nearest possible meaning considering the fact that this is a case of rendering a mid 19th century exposition of law in elegant, often archaic Portuguese into a legal language understandable to contemporary Indian lawyers.

Article 713 – Negative stipulation.— Whoever has assumed obligation not to do some act, incurs liability to pay damages from the time of contravention, and the creditor may demand, that the work already done, if work has been done, be demolished at the cost of the person who had undertaken not to do it.

SECTION I

SUB-SECTION I

GUARANTEE IN GENERAL

Article 822 – Accessory character of guarantee.— Guarantee is void in law if it secures an obligation which is not valid, save where the nullity of obligation arises exclusively from the incapacity of the person.

§ 1 - In the last case, the guarantee subsists, even though the principal debtor may cause rescission of his obligation.

§ 2 - Such exception does not include the guarantee offered for the loan granted to the minor as explained in the respective title, covered by articles 1535 and 1536.

Article 823 – Extension of guarantee.— The guarantee shall not exceed the principal debt, nor it shall be contracted under more onerous conditions. However, it may be contracted for lesser amount and under less onerous conditions. Where it exceeds the debt or the conditions are more onerous, the guarantee shall not be null in law, but it will be reduced to the precise terms of the debt covered by guarantee.

¹⁸ Arts. 818 to 854 – Cf. Sections 126 to 147 of Indian Contract Act, 1872.

Article 824 – Requirements of the guarantor.— When any debtor is bound to furnish a guarantee, the creditor is not bound to accept the surety who does not have:

Article 835 – Where there is more than one guarantor.— Where there are many sureties of the same debtor for the same debt, each of them is liable for the totality, unless there is a declaration to the contrary; but, when only one of them is sued, he may ask that summons be issued to others so that they may defend themselves alongwith him or be jointly decreed against, each one for his share, and in such case, shall be liable only in their absence.

§ Sole paragraph: The benefit of the division between the co-sureties is not attracted in cases where there is no right of first exhausting the assets of principal debtor.

Article 836 – Liability for insolvency of the other guarantors.— The surety, who may ask for the benefit of the division is only liable proportionately for the insolvency of other sureties, prior to the division, and even not for such division where the creditor voluntarily had made a pro rata division without the same being challenged by the surety.

Article 837.— Right to recover assets through execution in security contract.— He who stood as security of surety enjoys the benefits of remedy of exhausting the assets, not only against the surety but also the principal debtor.

²¹ The Portuguese concept of 'hipoteca' (Article 888) is a contractual right, a kind of security or charge on immovable property and has similar effect as 'Mortgage' (section 58 onwards of Transfer of Property Act, 1882) which however is viewed as a form of transfer. It is different from hypothecation, a term which relates to movables and is not defined in our traditional statutes being a term of mercantile/banking usage, first mentioned in a statute in Securitisation and Reconstruction of Financial Assets and Enforcement of Security Interest Act, 2002, under section 2(n). Some foreign codes like that of Quebec use the word 'Hypothechs' Section 2660 onwards, but there it covers both, movables and immovables. The Mexican Civil Code translates 'hipoteca' as mortgage (Articles 1407, 3039, 2893).

²² Mortgages (Arts. 888 to 948) in Portuguese Law are viewed as a form of contract but in Indian Law they are viewed as a mode of transfer of property under Transfer of Property Act, 1882, Sections 58 to 104.
